LandTrust Signs Alcoa Relicensing Settlement Agreement

Nearly 6,000 acres are proposed to be protected, which includes a 1,085 acre addition to Morrow Mountain State Park, 4,062 acres added to Wildlife Resources Commission Gamelands Program, and 750 more acres to become county public recreation areas. See page 8 for a detailed map of properties anticipated to be protected.

Teague-Smith Easement a True Family Affair

All conservation easement donations are family decisions, but when Mary Teague and her brother, Willard Smith, decided to donate an easement on their 82-acre family farm in Davidson County, the donation became a true family affair. That's because Mary and husband, James, had already deeded their share of ownership to their two daughters for estate planning purposes, retaining a life estate on the property where they will settle after refurbishing a historic home. Including spouses, eight people signed the easement, a new LandTrust record. But the effort was worth it, creating a new foothold for conservation in this still-rural section of eastern Davidson County.

Letter From The Executive Director

Saving Working Landscapes, Saving Jobs

By Jason A. Walser

Chris Hoffner is giving it his best shot.

A fourth generation dairy farmer in western Rowan County, Chris is doing everything he can to keep the farm operation, as well as his livelihood, going. His story was recently told in the Salisbury Post as part of a series on the declining dairy business in our region. With the costs of gas and feed increasing while market prices for milk remain relatively flat, Chris knew he couldn't continue to compete with those who are milking thousands of head of cattle three times per day with campuses of migrant labor on cheaper land in the Midwest and elsewhere in the South.

So Chris decided to go organic, where demand is increasing and the final product sells for a premium. But the road is not going to be an easy one. First of all, his family's 300 acres of crop fields must be converted to organic (no pesticides, artificial fertilizers, etc.) for several growing cycles before he can get "organic" certification and sell his milk for a premium. It will also take time for him to replace his herd to one completely free of the antibiotics and hormones traditionally used to create artificially long and productive lactation cycles among the cattle. During this time of increasing costs and lower output, he will still only be able to sell the milk he produces at the lower non-organic rates.

But while you and I are still sleeping each day, Chris is in the milking barn doing all he can to keep his dream of farming alive.

And his hard work is paying off. Already, he has attained certification for some of his cattle and is seeing the potential of higher returns when his entire herd becomes certified.

So what does this have to do with The LandTrust for Central North Carolina? As noted in the Salisbury Post story, Chris could not have had the chance to go organic if we had not contracted with the City of Kannapolis to buy their land next to the Hoffner farm and keep it in farming. Aside from preventing incompatible uses going in next to the dairy, this project also provides Chris and his family the assurance that they will continue to be able to lease a couple hundred acres for production of natural hay to feed the cattle.

Chris is working hard to keep the farm together, and his story is unfortunately not unique. We know of dozens of such similar success stories here at The LandTrust, and wish we could share each and every one of them with you, our donors and friends. Our hard work is indeed making a difference; one farm, one community, one watershed at a time. And we could not do these projects without the support of YOU, The LandTrust donor. On behalf of Chris and countless other farmers, hikers, hunters, paddlers, birdwatchers, historians, and future generations, I thank you for making these projects possible.

Jason Walser speaks to Chris Hoffner, David Lentz, and Allen Hoffner, farmers currently leasing Kannapolis Lands.

The property features rolling pasture, mature hardwood forests, about five acres of wetlands, scenic viewshed on Old Highway 64 and Conrad Hill Mine Road, and approximately 4,600 linear feet of tributaries to the nearby Fourmile Branch, which feeds into High Rock Lake. There's even a family connection to the creek. "This land originally belonged to our ancestor Captain Peter Hedrick, an officer in the Revolutionary War," says Willard. "The story is that he was such an outstanding officer that, in return for his service during the war, he was granted land four miles down the creek and four miles across." Thus, the name "Fourmile Branch."

Today, the property's historic significance is defined primarily by the Victorian house that Mary and Willard's grandfather, Grover "Pops" Hedrick, built beginning in 1908. Mary and James are restoring the grand two-story structure, visible from Old Highway 64, where Mary and Willard spent so many happy hours. "As children we were always at that house, either gardening or playing in the attic. Now I'm going home," says Mary of her restoration efforts. "I like to call the house 'My Tara,'" she adds with a laugh.

The property is also home to an abundance of wildlife—a recent visit revealed numerous deer tracks, while a chorus of frogs sang happily from the wetlands. There's even a ghost! "Some folks used to say you could see either a headless horse, or a horse with a headless rider, walking through the fields," recalls Willard.

Mary and Willard are proud of their efforts to conserve the family property and are advocates for conservation, reaching out to neighbors and relatives with adjoining properties to educate them about conservation options. "My family has always said, 'Save the land. Keep the land, they don't make it anymore. Be good stewards of the land,'" says Mary, explaining their decision to donate the easement. "This was the best way to do it. My mother always wanted us to protect the land, and Pops (her grandfather) would be proud we did. So we just decided to go for it." A family affair, indeed.

Thanks and Best Wishes to Kevin Redding!

In the middle of March, Kevin announced to The LandTrust he would be leaving us to assume the role of Executive Director at our sister organization to the north, The Piedmont Lands Conservancy (PLC). We would like to express our sincerest gratitude to Kevin for six years of dedication and accomplishments while working here. He has made great strides for conservation in this area, and will continue to with PLC, one of the most respected and effective land trusts in the state. This move allows him to be closer home and spend more time with wife, Lori, and son, Boone. The staff will greatly miss his positive and outgoing personality, sense of humor, and ability to make big things happen, but we certainly wish him the best as he moves to this next stage of his life.

Kevin began with The LandTrust in 2001 as Grant's Creek Coordinator, then became the Uwharrie Land Specialist, and lastly the Associate Director. His knowledgeable experience in land conservation, along with his natural ability to work with people and strong administrative skills have helped The LandTrust make great strides for conservation.

One of his most notable achievements is spearheading the Bingham Lands acquisition, 1160 acres of mature hardwood forests with miles of Uwharrie River frontage. He has also worked to protect properties along important waterways, was an integral part of the historical Pisgah Covered Bridge preservation, and arranged for the last-minute protection of 290 acres of would-be subdivision next to the Birkhead Wilderness Area. From protecting vast expanses of Stanly County farmland, to important ecological corridors, to reconnecting portions of the Uwharrie Trail, Kevin has provided leadership for many conservation achievements. We hope you will join us in wishing him the very best in all his future endeavors.

LandTrust Benefits from Uwharrie Trail Run

On a crisp Saturday morning in February, over 600 amazing athletes converged on the Uwharrie National Recreational Trail to challenge their bodies and minds. Their goal: complete either an 8, 20 or 40 mile run across the rugged Uwharrie Mountain landscape. This year marked the 16th Annual Uwharrie Trail Run and the first time that the proceeds of the race were donated to The LandTrust to support our work on reconnecting the historic Uwharrie Trail.

In addition to receiving the net proceeds from the race, participants were also given the option of donating an additional $3 to help make the event carbon neutral. These funds were used to purchase actual carbon credits on the open market and will help The LandTrust plant trees on our protected properties.

The LandTrust would like to thank all the sponsors and dedicated volunteers who make the Uwharrie Trail Run such a great event. Your support allows us to continue Saving the Places You Love, like the historic Uwharrie Trail.

As the sun comes up, participants eagerly await the start.

Correction on Historic Cowan Farm Article

In our last newsletter, we announced the protection of the historic Cowan Farm. In the article we referred to the home as the historic Cowan-Wagoner House, built in 1810. The home is actually the historic Wood Grove House built by Thomas Cowan sometime around 1800. We apologize for these inadvertent inaccuracies.

Birkhead Wilderness Hike

An energetic group of hikers from near and far, many with canine companions in tow, gathered at the Thornburg Trailhead on March 3rd for The LandTrust's Birkhead Wilderness Hike. The nine-mile hike offered breathtaking views of the rolling Uwharrie Mountains, and from the top of the highest peak staff proudly pointed out the newly acquired Birkhead Property. Although the trail was damp from the previous weeks' rain, the attendees trekked on through the gorgeous landscape, enjoying everything from the beautiful creeks to the huge shortleaf pine trees. This warm weather hike refreshed and reminded all that spring is on the way, as did the garter snake, who made a trail-side appearance while soaking up the sun's rays.

Morrow Mountain Hike

Jeff Michael led an excited and interested group of hikers by some wonderful historical and natural wonders in Morrow Mountain State Park on March 31st. Members of the group squeezed through Indian needle rock, we all peered curiously at a historic rock wall, and Dennis Testerman even found a picture perfect arrowhead! To add to the excitement, a veritable herd of deer ran swiftly by us, a huge black snake was sighted on a nearby log, and beautiful trees and wildflowers, including dogwoods and fringe orchids, were in bloom. A midway break at beautiful Mountain Creek and a gorgeous view of towering Morrow Mountain as we came near the end made for a great afternoon jaunt.

LandTrust Office Open House

When we invited our supporters to our Salisbury office on a Thursday afternoon for an Open House, we were expecting a handful of die-hard supporters to show up around 4:00 p.m. and stay for an hour and a half. We were in for a pleasant surprise. Almost 50 LandTrust supporters showed up and the event lasted almost four hours! Staff and Board members mingled with bankers, volunteers, business owners, farmers, lawyers, and landowners. We shared some recent successes and fielded questions about current and future projects, and all present enjoyed the opportunity to get to each other better and hear stories and suggestions. Due to the overwhelming success of this event we plan to make Open Houses a regular occurrence.

Environmental Education Event

When we advertised for our Environmental Education Event we asked: "Do you know what the skull of an armadillo or vampire bat looks like? Ever seen a whale vertebra or a red eyed vireo nest?" We were surprised to find out just how knowledgeable the young people that showed up were and how many knew the answers! Over 45 people joined us at the Center for the Environment at Catawba College as Lisa Wear's and her students taught the attendees through hands-on displays. The event was enjoyable and informative for all who attended.

Unique Conservation Properties for Sale!

Hazen Farm, Davie County

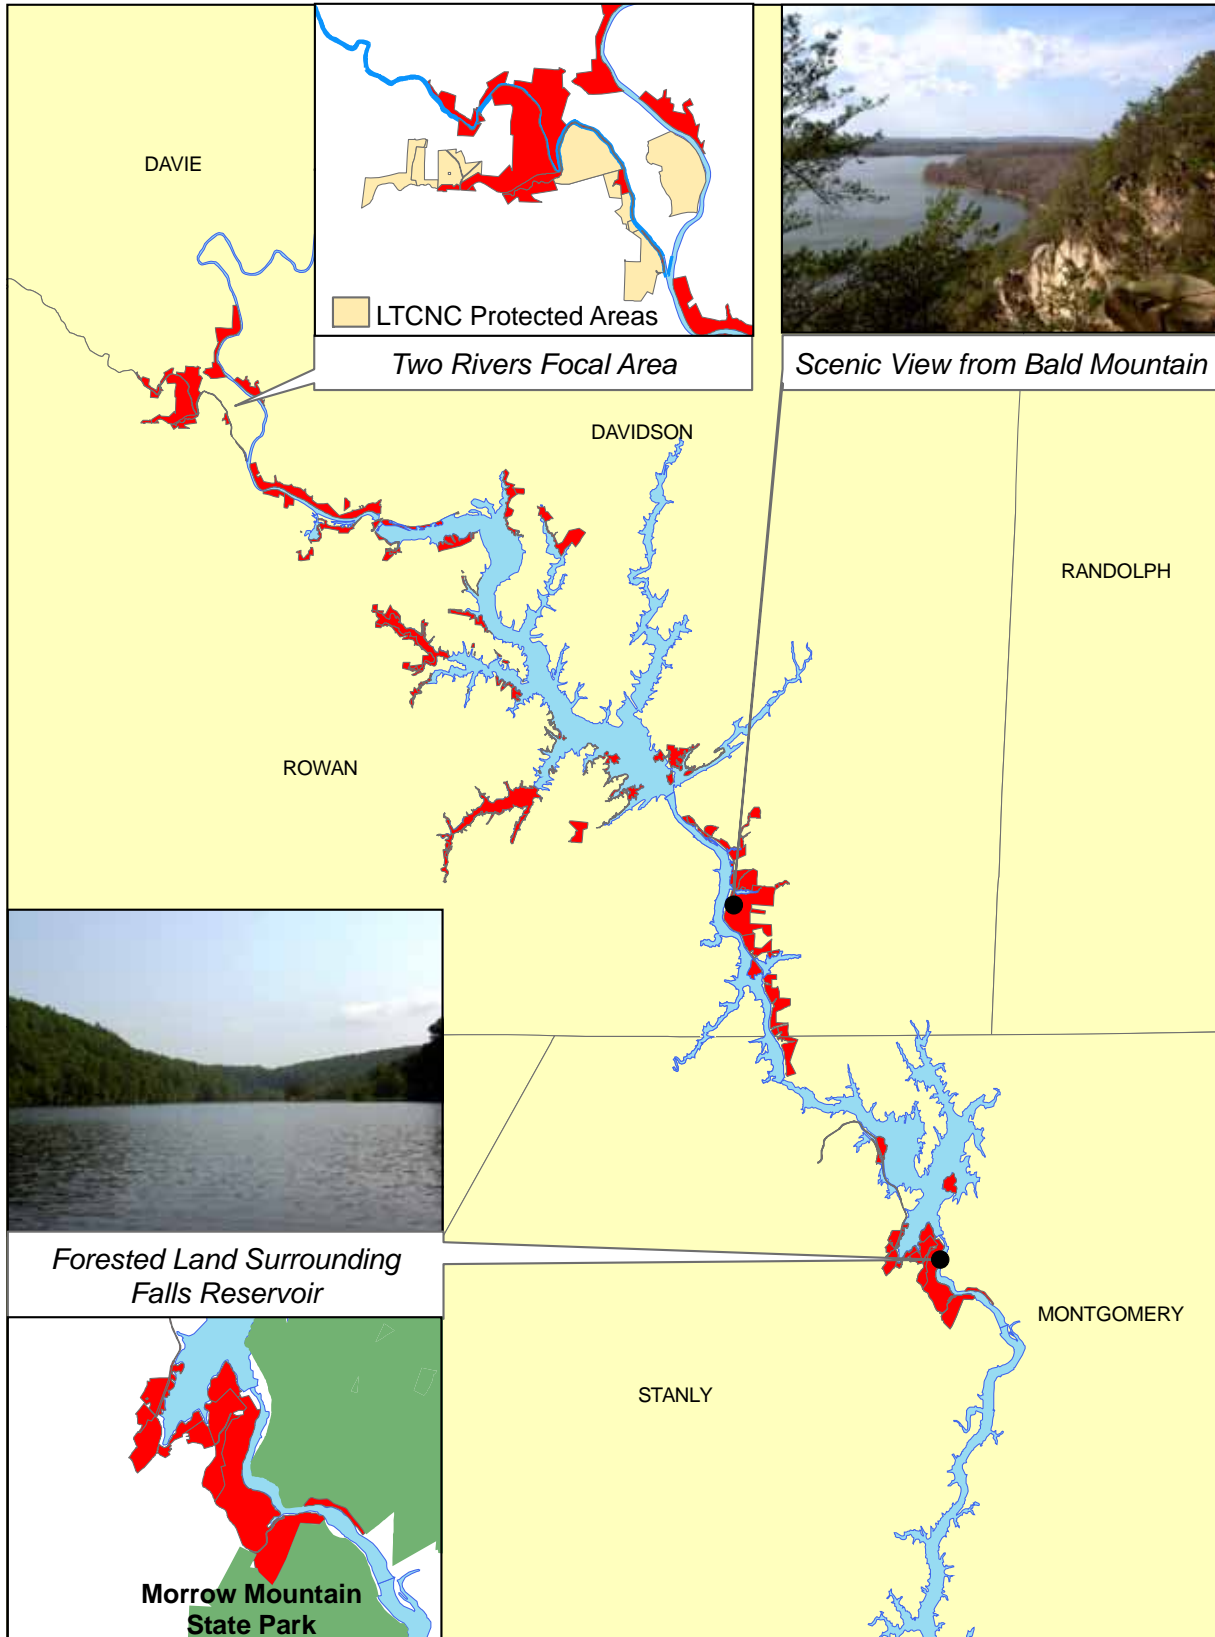

This 138 acres is located between Cooleemee Plantation (1800 acres protected) and the Yadkin River where it intersects with Highway 64. The property has river frontage, rolling hills, and hardwood forests. Uniquely protected after the Hazens purchased it from a charity they had previously donated it to in order to prevent the beautiful hardwoods from being clear-cut. Now you could be a part of this beautiful farm's protection. The LandTrust seeks a buyer for the property subject to an easement. This beautiful setting could be your home, and you could enjoy the natural landscape while also leaving a legacy for years to come.

Bald Mountain Property, Davidson County

This beautiful 88-acre conservation property is located adjacent to Bald Mountain and Tuckertown Lake in southeastern Davidson County. It possesses a charming 2-bedroom home with beautifully manicured grounds, a swimming pool, and stunning vistas, all encompassed by a mature hardwood forest. This property will soon be surrounded on three sides by a new county park that separates conservation property from Tuckertown Lake. This is a true mountain retreat, just minutes away from Salisbury, Asheboro, and Lexington, that needs a buyer who appreciates its natural beauty.

Volunteer Profiles

Adele Goodman

Adele is a passionate conservationist and consistently uses her time and talents to encourage others to make responsible environmental choices. She works for Penske Racing, and began in the Drivers' Schedules & Marketing-Licensing department, and now is the Executive Assistant to the President.

Adele's family has been in Rowan County since the mid-1700's. Her descendents came from Germany down the wagon road and settled in North Carolina because the land here was agriculturally productive, similar to their homeland. The family farm has been in the family for six generations. They love the farm, and meet there every Sunday, sharing a walk in the woods and stories of their past. Adele volunteers with The LandTrust because she strongly believes we must all be good stewards of the resources and gifts we have been given. Adele states, "It's not hard to support an organization like this - above all else, they give me much hope that we can make a difference. It has always been an honor and privilege to help with anything The LandTrust is involved with."

Meredith Reamer Sullivan

Meredith Reamer Sullivan has been the volunteer event coordinator for The LandTrust for Central North Carolina since 2005. She gives unselfishly of her time, and has spent countless hours planning successful fundraising events. Meredith and her husband, Paul, live on an 18 acre horse farm, and are passionate about conservation.

Meredith is a graduate of UNC Chapel Hill, and previously had a successful career as an Interior Designer. In addition to her LandTrust work, she serves on the Board of Directors of the Rowan Museum.

Meredith has coordinated events in many of the ten counties served by The LandTrust. She has also been involved in student outreach, teaching the importance of protecting the environment. Additionally, she is a champion of recycling and adaptive reuse.

Meredith's energy, dedication, commitment, and belief in conservation have been a tremendous asset to The LandTrust.
